

Dear Parent/Guardian

Information about Speech and Language Support in school

We are writing to you as Dorset HealthCare's Children and Young People's Speech and Language Therapy Service (CYP SALT Service) is working in partnership with schools and families in a new way. This letter tells you about how we will be doing this.

BCP Council, Dorset Council and NHS Dorset have been working together to introduce a new way of supporting children's speech, language and communication, this is called The Balanced System ©. This means that children will have access to the right support, from the right person at the right time.

Your child's school will have a Link Speech and Language Therapist (SLT) from September 2024. The SLT, SENCO and school staff will work together. There will be support at universal, targeted and specialist levels. Children will receive support that meets their individual needs.

Universal support	This is for all pupils in the class. The speech and language therapist or assistant will support the school with helpful advice, resources, and signposting to useful websites. These things will help all children and young people with their communication skills.
Targeted support	This is for pupils who need targeted help with a known need. This support is provided in partnership with others. Support may be led by school staff, the speech and language therapist, or the speech and language therapy assistant. This might be a group, using approaches in the classroom, or one-to-one activities. Most children with a known need will find this level and universal support will meet their needs.
Specialist support	A small number of children will need more than universal and targeted support. They will have a speech, language or communication need that cannot be met within existing interventions. This specialist support may be led by school staff, the speech and language therapy team or other professionals e.g., Specialist Teachers. This level of support will be offered at different times, as needed, as part of their support plan.

The school's Link SLT will have regular meetings with the school. They will talk about pupils with identified or suspected speech, language and/or communication difficulties. Together they will agree how to support that pupil best.

How will I know if my child is identified as having difficulties?

Sometimes the next step in assessing the best type of support is for your child to be observed by the Link SLT whilst they are in class or playing in the playground. If targeted level support is identified for your child, your child's teacher will let you know and give you information about it. Some children will be offered an individual appointment if they need a more in-depth assessment. This will take place in school and during the school day. Your child's school will notify you about this. You are always welcome to attend with your child or speak with the therapist before or afterwards.

What happens next?

When we work directly with a child at the specialist level, we will register the child with our service for an episode of care. We will work with your child, your family, school, and other key people in their life. We will lead or support an intervention or short series of interventions. Once these are completed and ongoing support is in place, we will close the episode of care. Your child's school will monitor their progress. If more support is needed in the future, your child's school will talk to their Link SLT and agree the next steps. Most children will not need specialist level support. They will be well supported at universal and targeted levels.

If your child needs to be registered with our service to access the specialist level of support, we enter their details and record our contacts with them on an Electronic Patient Record (EPR) system called SystmOne. This system is also used by their GP. It has been specially designed to hold your child's health information confidentially in one place. Please see the enclosed leaflet about your child's electronic health record. At the start of each school year we are asking all parents/carers to give consent for their child to be supported in this new way of working.
